Having no commitments or strings attached on an island named from the Greek word for freedom, buddies enjoy staying in a two-bedroom luxury oceanview townhomes overlooking the marina and the Bahamian Shoals. During a Deep Sea Fishing excursion for dolphin, tuna, sailfish, wahoo or marlin with local Bahamian guide, Captain Callie, anglers savor a cooler of ice-cold Kalik Beer, an Out Island favorite. After reeling in their catch, Barracuda’s Oceanfront Beach Bar & Grille will sauté, grill or fry it to perfection and serve it with all the fixins, like peas and rice, a Bahamian staple.

A private party with gourmet delicacies from The Bahama Coffee Company takes place on one of the Schooner Cays, four small untouched, uninhabited islands shaped differently each day with the tides. While touring The Island School and The Cape Institute -- research centers committed to conserving the population of wild marine life -- guests observe fish hatcheries, bonefish studies and lobster grow-outs. The most difficult decision men must make at Cape Eleuthera is whether to spend the rest of their getaway scuba diving, windsurfing, sailing, riding the waves at Surfer’s Beach, kayaking, or all of the above while enjoying the great outdoors.

Boasting one of the largest marinas in the Out Islands of The Bahamas, the new $85 million Cape Eleuthera Resort & Yacht Club is situated on a private 4,500-acre peninsula on Eleuthera Island and features two-bedroom oceanview townhome resort accommodations lining the marina and future beachfront lots and homes for real estate opportunists. An authentic, Bahamian Out Island experience is what makes Cape Eleuthera so appealing.

With activities ranging from deep sea fishing and exploring uninhabited islands to soaking in the sun on secluded private beaches and kayaking the turquoise waters, Cape Eleuthera has something for every traveler. Cape Eleuthera’s convenient location is ideal for a weekend island getaway, yet the Technicolor waters and expansive beaches tempt guests to stay a lifetime.
